

CHEMISTRY GLOSSARY

Hydrogen is extremely flammable and is used as motor fuel.

Carbon originates both graphite and diamond.

Chlorine is used in the purification process of water, in disinfectants or as bleaching agent.

About the 50% of Oxygen in the planet is produced by the sea.

Nitrogen is used in the ice-cream production.

According to some cosmological models there will be a time in which all the matter will be converted into iron.

In the past, Magnesium was used as camera flash.

Sodium chloride (NaCl) is commonly known as salt.

The mercury thermometer due to its toxicity has been banned in the 2009.