

Nitrogen

Nitrogen is a common element in the universe, estimated at about seventh in total abundance in the Milky Way and the Solar System. The name comes from the Greek πνίγειν "to choke", directly referencing nitrogen's asphyxiating properties.